Uttarakhand High Court's verdict pushes the boundary

New Delhi, April 22: The Uttarakhand high court's verdict quashing the President's rule in the state comes as a major embarrassment for the NDA government that rushed to the Supreme Court for succour. Quashing the March 27 proclamation, a division bench headed by Uttarakhand HC Chief Justice, KM Joseph said the imposition of the President's rule under Art 356 of the Constitution was contrary to the law laid down by the Supreme Court. Instead it ordered the ousted chief minister to prove his government's majority on the floor of the assembly on April 29. The high court's verdict is unprecedented given that a state government was reinstated after being dismissed by the Centre. Previous judicial orders only set aside the President's rule and eschewed from reviving dismissed governments, mainly because the delayed verdict hardly left any scope for such relief. In the SR Bommai case, a nine-judge bench of the Supreme Court in 1994 ruled that if the court strikes down the proclamation imposing President's rule, it has the power to restore the dismissed government to office and reactivate the legislative assembly. But the top court could not revive the assemblies in Karnataka, Meghalaya and Nagaland as fresh elections had already been held. Even in the infamous Bihar case (Rameshwar Prasad v Union of India), the Supreme Court in January 2006 chose to exercise restraint and stopped at quashing the notification imposing President's rule. A five-judge bench headed by then-Chief Justice of India, YK Sabharwal, had taken note of the fact that fresh elections had already been notified in the state.
