Interrupted childhood: need for state intervention and assistances

By Reena Nongmaithem

Imphal, Jan.15: Being pampered by one's parents, guardians and elders, receiving the loving care and attention from them and playing hide and seek with friends are some of the most memorable moments of every life. But what may be the memory of a boy who is hardly 12 years of age, who has missed all these sweet moments and taking the responsibility as the main bread earner of his family. Naobi, a cute and smart hotel boy of Nambol hotel, located just opposite to the office of Imphal Times at Elangbam Leikai still has the seemingly unattainable urge to continue with his studies. He dropped his studies just before giving his class V examination since his family's deteriorating financial condition forced him to work in the hotel as substitute to his unhealthy mother since four months back.

With the daily wage of Rs 200, Naobi just barely manages to keep the fire in their kitchen burning. "I buy rice, vegetables, groceries and other necessary kitchen items - and sometimes medicines for my parents", replied the boy when this reporter asked "What you do with the money everyday?" Naobi said "I will continue with my school again" as a matter of fact when inquired about his plan for attending classes again. Naobi is the second of two sons of Hijam Naba Singh and Hijam Ongbi Hemabati of Ningom Thongjao near PPLYW Club under Kakwa Police station. The boy disclosed that his father used to work at a brick field, but cannot go to the work regularly as he falls sick very frequently. He said his brother Somojit (15) too dropped his studies while studying at class IX and go around looking for any available menial work. He also informed that his brother does not return home during night, but said he has no idea where his brother is going or what exactly he is doing.

Expressing her love and sympathy for the boy, Oinam Sushila, owner of the hotel where Naobi is working at present, informed that she had even asked Naobi to stay with her as her adopted son, but that Naobi denied as he has to look after his ailing parents and care for his family. Sushila said naobi joined the hotel around 4 months back as substitute to his mother who contacted the hotel for work. "Since Naobi's Mother was critically unhealthy she send her son as her substitute", said the sympathetic employer. Naobi travels everyday on his Bicycle. He reaches the hotel by 7 am works till 6 in the evening every day. No doubt there must be many more destitute children like Naobi in the society on one side, forced to face the harsh fate, his precious childhood cut short by circumstances while on the other, the state must be having provisions and various alternatives for rehabilitation and social reintegration such as foster care, sponsorship and aftercare of such children who have remain unutilized due to the lack of awareness, or worse still, as a result of the indifference of those authorized and entrusted with the authority and resources to address such unfortunate incidents.

SC: Is AFSPA in Manipur eternal?

New Delhi, Jan. 15: The Supreme Court on Thursday asked the Manipur government how long the Army should be deployed in the state and enjoy unaccountable power under the Armed Forces Special Powers Act (AFSPA) and whether 35 years of the Army's presence had improved the law and order situation. The court had appointed a high-level inquiry committee headed by an ex-judge of the SC to inquire into allegations that the armed forces had carried out over 1,500 extra-judicial killings in the last 30 years and police were refusing to file FIRs because of AFSPA. READ ALSO: AFSPA extended in Manipur by another year AFSPA was imposed in Manipur on September 8, 1980 to tackle the lawlessness created by four main insurgent groups through dacoity, ransom and killings. Petitions by an NGO 'Extra-judicial Execution Victims Families Association of Manipur' and former director of Manipur Health Services Th Suresh Singh had sought withdrawal of AFSPA.

After getting the report and hearing the petitions, a bench of Justices Madan B Lokur and U U Lalit told the state government. "AFSPA was supposed to be a temporary measure. But it has been there for the last 35 years. Two generations have grown up under the presence of Army. It was supposed to only aid the democratic government in tackling law and order situation created by insurgent groups." Appearing for the Congress-led Ibobi Singh government in Manipur, senior advocate V Giri told the court that AFSPA was still needed to maintain law and order as insurgency continued to thrive in the state given its porous international border. When AFSPA was imposed, there were four prominent insurgent groups, after 35 years, there were more than a dozen prominent insurgent groups in Manipur, he added. The bench said, "AFSPA was imposed after declaring the state a disturbed area. You mean to say that in 35 years of Army presence in the state, the situation has not improved to remove the disturbed area tag from the state? Has nothing changed on the law and order front for the last three decades?" Giri attempted to convince the court that democracy had deep roots in the state, which saw very high percentage of voting in the last several assembly elections. "The test is whether the general public is fed up with AFSPA? The answer is, it is not so. Democracy is alive and kicking in the state. Should the elected representatives not take a decision whether AFSPA should be withdrawn or not? People are not disgusted with Army presence in the state. The Army is not in conflict with the people," Giri said. However, he admitted before the court that not many FIRs were registered on complaints accusing Army personnel of extra-judicial killings. The bench said, "One can discount one or two aberrations in the operations carried out in insurgency affected areas, but not in 70-odd cases. In all these cases, the complaint of the commoners or victims' families had not been converted into FIRs." It reminded Giri that Tripura has decided to do away with AFSPA. Pritish Suresh Singh had said, "People of Manipur are not against the armed forces and, in fact, majority desires the Army to protect them against external aggression but everyone is against AFSPA which has been often misused." He had also sought quashing of a notification declaring the entire state as a disturbed area except for the municipal limits of capital Imphal, saying, "In the name of disturbed area status, widespread deployment of armed forces has created an alarming environment in which exceptions have become the rule." The petition filed by the NGO through Babloo Loitongbam said, "The legal mechanism has failed to ensure remedial measures relating to abuse or misuse of powers by the armed forces' personnel, who are not held accountable for their illegal and inhuman actions robbing citizens of their most basic right to life guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution."
