NEFIS condemns Delhi University's decision to make Hindi compulsory!

IT News
Imphal, Sept. 29: North-East Forum for International Solidarity (NEFIS) condemns the compulsory imposition of Hindi on DU students who come from different parts of the country as another disgraceful attempt to discriminate against them. It is especially shocking when the University that has been trying unsuccessfully since last many years to make Hindi mandatory in DU syllabus, has this time done it without issuing any notification. It should be noted that even in 2013 DU had attempted to impose Hindi/Modern Indian Languages (MIL) on DU students, but had to withdraw its decision due to militant campaign launched against it by NEFIS. Compulsory imposition of Hindi would cause immense hardships for the students who belong to communities that do not speak Hindi. This step amounts to nothing less than cultural chauvinism on part of the university administration directed against the communities from the North-East because most of them are not adept in the language. The new syllabus, would put the students of the North-East under serious disadvantage vis-à-vis students of rest of the country. This gross neglect of the special needs of the students of the North-East is not a new thing. It is our observation that in the framing of university policies the interests of the students from the North-East is always neglected.

 NEFIS along with north-east students will launch an agitation against this recent attempt by DU authorities to discriminate against them.

Pakistan Air Force vigilant, ready to combat external aggression

Islamabad, Sept 29: The Pakistan Air Force (PAF) is vigilant at all times and ready to combat any external aggression, a PAF spokesperson said in response to the unprovoked firing by Indian forces at the Line of Control (LoC) early Thursday morning in which two Pakistani soldiers were martyred.
 The spokesperson said India's claim that it was a surgical strike is based on a fabricated lie.

 The PAF will protect Pakistan's airspace at any cost, the spokesperson said. The unprovoked firing came amid mounting tensions between the two nuclear-armed adversaries over occupied Kashmir.
 The firing at the LoC in Kel and Lipa sectors began at 2:30 AM and continued till 8:00 AM, ISPR said in a statement. Pakistan has dismissed Indian claims that the firing was part of a surgical strike.

 "The notion of surgical strike linked to alleged terrorists bases is an illusion being deliberately generated by Indian(s) to create false effects. This quest by Indian establishment to create media hype by rebranding cross border fire as surgical strike is fabrication of truth. Pakistan has made it clear that if there is a surgical strike on Pakistani soil, same will be strongly responded," the ISPR said.

India hits Pakistan along LoC, casting spotlight on savage, secret war

New Delhi, Sept. 29: The Indian army struck along a giant arc on the Line of Control early this morning, staging what it described as "surgical strikes" on terrorist launch-pads inside Pakistan-occupied Kashmir (PoK). Lieutenant-General Rambr Singh, India's Director-General of Military Operations (DGMO), said the strikes, which took place "along the Line of Control" caused "significant damage" but offered no further details.
 In military textbooks, a "surgical strike" refers to an attack that causes damage to its intended target not to a mode of assault. Pakistan's military said that two of its soldiers were killed when troops "exchanged fire across the Line of Control" in an engagement which began at 2:30 a.m. and ended at 8:00a.m. In a later statement, it denied any strikes had taken place across the Line of Control (LoC), claiming instead that there had been "cross-border fire initiated and conducted by India which is an 'existential phenomenon'".
 General Singh's statement left open the possibility that India may have used artillery or anti-tank missiles to precision-target terrorist launching positions without risking troops in a mission across the Line of Control.

 Kel and Lipa are both known to be significant launching stations for the Lashkar-e-Taiba (LeT) and other terrorist groups where small units of jihadists gather near military forward posts for the last stage of their journey across the LoC into northern Kashmir. Bhimber, similarly, is a major axis of infiltration into Rajouri and Poonch.
 India and Pakistan had agreed to a ceasefire along the Line of Control in 2003, following the India-Pakistan military crisis that followed the Jaish-e-Muhammad's attack on Parliament House on December 13, 2001. However, efforts to arrive at a formal signed agreement stalled in 2006, following disputes over the rules governing new defensive fortifications.
 Ever since the long jihad in Kashmir began in 1989, troops on both sides of the LoC have been locked in an often-savage secret war which General Singh's press conference has for the first time brought out into the open. History suggests that the fighting on Thursday is unlikely to mark the end of the story.

 While 2016 has been the most peaceful year on the LoC in a decade, the ceasefire had been fraying steadily since Lance-Naik Hem Raj and Lance-Naik Sudhakar Naik were beheaded in a jihadist strike in January 2013, amidst a surge in infiltration backed by the Pakistan Army.
 The fighting that began in 2013 had its genesis in events of October 2012 when Pakistan complained of new Indian border work at Charunda in Uri. India responded that the work were purely defensive, intended to prevent illegal border crossings. The unresolved dispute led to exchanges of fire, which eventually escalated into shelling and the killings of soldiers on both sides. Late in July 2013, Pakistan complained that "unprovoked" Indian fire had led to the death of Sepoy Asim Iqbal in the Nazia Peer sector near the town of Rawlakote. India, however, said the firing began in response to an infiltration attempt.
