MSAD organises discussion prog. on Communal Harmony

IT News
New Delhi, May 5,

MSAD organised a discussion program on the theme "Communal Harmony in a Multicultural Society: a perspective on communal conflicts during 1990s" with a view on the ongoing political scenario in Manipur and its relevant past.

The said program was organised by taking into consideration the past unfortunate historical events related to communal conflicts among the various communities of Manipur during 1990s. It is a known fact that Manipur was a multi-cultural State with various communities living together in a peaceful co-operative environment, where social harmony and peaceful co-existence was part and parcel of everyday normal life.

Unfortunately the above trend has been distorted with the forceful entry of Indian political system which uses certain religio-culture and ethnic groups as mobilizing tactics for obtaining political power and plays a divisional politics to penetrate deep through our blood. With it, the notion of tyranny of majority with majority determines everything becomes a norm rather than exception and sections of Manipuri society get infected with the same dangerous mindset of dividing Manipur's multi-cultural ethos for their personal political advantages. The above decadent political culture and the successive emotional blackmailing of people by some elites of Manipur had finally culminated into full blown communal clashes among and between various people of Manipur which could be seen with the unfortunate events of communally organised Naga-Kuki clash in 1992, systematically orchestrated majority political power holder Meitei community killings of Pangals in May 1993 and later on Kuki-Paite clash in 1997. With the above observations, MSAD is of the view that the above scenarios of us getting divided while some agents taking easiest political advantages still keep continuing. Various sections of the society should come together, look back at our past and analyse together the causes of the said and other events keeping aside the theorising of contested histories so that our rich multi-cultural ethos remains intact, where respecting and recognizing different communities living in Manipur as one fraternal community becomes a norm.

Problems faced by Indian teachers

I feel that teachers should consider themselves as master of their trade and not a slave of their trade. One should not forget that apart from being a teacher, one is also a member of the society as a mother, wife, girl-friend, daughter, sister and most important as a friend.

There is no secret recipe to achieve eternal bliss of work life balance. It can only be achieved by rigorous time management and making it a daily habit otherwise one should be prepared to feel burnt out which will cause frustration, helplessness and worst professional dissatisfaction.

Personal image and society's expectations
A teacher is expected to project a 'perfect teacher' image. She is required to epitomize calmness and behave like a conservative moral police. Society puts this immense pressure on teachers as if their every decision, act, and word can inspire or devastate students. So if a parent, student or God forbid the school coordinator spots a teacher having a quiet romantic dinner with her partner, then it won't be accepted as decent behavior as per the moral code of conduct that teachers are expected to follow.

Well, one can try their luck by quoting Amol Palekar's dialogue in Golmaal that the person in question happened to be the twin sibling, but rest assured that teacher will become the talk of the town. Think of the curious kids that we teach. If one of them wants to write an open petition to the school authorities asking why RTE has not been implemented as per Government norms then it would boomerang the teacher for not curbing free thinking and inciting students.

If a student fails, it is the teacher's fault. If a student succeeds, then it is the achievement of the student alone. Teachers shoulder all the responsibility, but get little recognition or appreciation for their students' achievement.

To conclude most of us enter this profession as a new leaf: bright and starry eyed, idealist and ready to inspire the leaders of tomorrow. Once in the profession the reality of teaching hits us, draining the passion and 'joie de vivre' of this noble profession. Even if a teacher tries to maintain their grounds by shielding their students from the problems that plague our system, it seems vain as teachers have no power to solve them and become cogwheels to the entire system and even contributing to the system. The feeling is like the first job a teenager gets in his or her favorite restaurant. Instead of eating what she loves to eat every day, she prefers not to eat it again after seeing how it was prepared.

I feel rather than finding imperfections, the choice lies in one's hand. It is the personal choice of the teacher to find gratitude in staying with students and enjoying the heat of the classroom.

It is the choice of the teacher to find pleasure in one's threads of work, connection with families of strangers, appreciating the craft of an educator as the rhythm of the years pass by. Above all it is the choice of the teacher to find the purpose of teaching which is to teach children not to seek the best but to seek the deepest, the most varied, the fullest, the calmest and the truest.

When teachers would learn to appreciate their choices, battling the Goliaths would seem less overwhelming.
