The slumbering Beauty

Dr. Nunglekam Premi Devi

I doubt none, I fancy my presence
Holding her out in the meadow; gazing
She's happy; steadily
She's in hurry; speeding
She's one and she's heavy
She's hastening; shooting to charge
She accuse not a thing
She's bounding; chasing dog away
Bouncing and circling;
Hurdling, as I lay out her line stretching She's relieving and appeasing all;
She soothes her comfort all along the dull mallow
As I strike her wooden piece hard.

I doubt none, I fancy my presence
Holding her out in the meadow; gazing
Thrilling by her side; energetically
Watching her moves lively, as
She's enjoying; seasoning green grass
She moo her best;
As she lower savoring greenery
She's cooling and she's soft;
She's listening and she's nibbling
She's watching, as I move out
She's good and she's healthy;
She cares not the scorching heat nor do I;
I care as much as I leave her alone; gazing in the meadow
Blushing myself in this morning heat,
I do still Aware, not bothering; wearing innocence.

I doubt none, I fancy my presence
Holding her out in the meadow; gazing
She isn't weary;
She's calm and she isn't complaining;
She seems burning inside still she's low;
She moos and moos,
She stands unspeakable; she's a mother
She's delighting as she waves through breeze,
She understand me; awaiting
She crawls within the summery heat; napping
She's strong and she's too secure
She's one beautiful being; a friend
Enchanting by her slumbering beauty, I am dumbstruck;
I wonder how violable, the nature is?

I doubt none, I fancy my presence
Holding her out in the meadow; gazing
I promise her; not hesitating
I withdrew all my strengths, wearing the cursed heat
I temper her out; she's holding me back
As I Pour a bucketful of water; quenching her thirst
Shedding her teary out; her emotions
Speaking out, out loud her commitments;
As I lay my eyes upon her;
She's still one Beautiful slumbering soul.

Assam 'BJP-led govt pursuing a policy of deceiving northeastern people', says AASU

Agency
Guwahati Oct 28,

The All Assam Students Union (AASU) has described the Union government's Thursday notification authorising 16 collectors of seven states to register minority community people coming from Pakistan, Afghanistan and Bangladesh without valid legal documents as Indian citizens as the product of a very diabolic design against Assam and the Northeast. It also demanded of the Sarbananda Sonowal-led State government and its alliance partners, besides all other political parties to make their respective stand clear on this notification.

The student body in a statement here this evening said that it is opposed to this notification and it will relentlessly and boldly go on opposing this notification. The BJP-led government is in fact pursuing a policy of deceiving the people of the northeastern region surreptitiously. The AASU has been opposing the Union government's imposition of the Foreigners (Amendment) Order, 2015, Passport (Entry into India) Rules, 2015, Citizenship (Amendment) Bill, 2016 and the Long Term Visa on the people of the State as well as the rest of the Northeast. Agitations against all these impositions are currently on throughout the region.

Now the Union government, under the 2015 Order, has issued directive for registering the minority people coming from Pakistan, Afghanistan and Bangladesh as citizens of India in seven states of the country. The post-1971 migrants staying in Assam will also be able to avail the scope of this notification, which will be detrimental to the interest of the indigenous peoples of Assam and northeastern region as well. Against this move, an intense agitation would be launched, warned AASU president Dipanka Nath and general secretary Lurinjyoti Gogoi.

AASU chief adviser Samujjal Bhattacharya said the BJP-led government has started initiating steps after steps to stifle the interest of the indigenous peoples of Assam.

Boxing Elite Men's Nationals; Punjab's Himanshu Sharma shine on Day 1 of 3rd Elite Boxing Nationals

Correspondent
New Delhi, Oct 28

Punjab's Himanshu Sharma, the gold medal winner on his maiden overseas appearance at the Belgrade International Boxing in Serbia earlier this year, made his intentions clear as he boxed his way into the quarterfinals of the 3rd Elite Men's National Boxing Championships at the AIS rings in Pune today. He defeated Routh Suraj Kumar from West Bengal 5-0 in the Light-fly category (46 kg) without having to sweat it out much in what was a one-sided bout. On the opening day of the championships that witnessed as many as 39 qualifications round bouts, both Punjab and All India Police (AIP) pugilists dominated the rings with four each of their boxers entering the quarterfinals.

However, Delhi and Manipur were not far behind as three each of their boxers made it to the last eight stages while two boxers each from Maharashtra, Rajasthan, Jammu and Kashmir, Chandigarh and Services made the cut. Surprisingly, unconventional boxing states like Odisha, Gujarat, Pondicherry and Karnataka also ensured that their pugilists too made the quarterfinal round. As for the rest of the northeast, one each from Tripura, Assam, Arunachal Pradesh, Sikkim and Nagaland qualified for the knockout round. Himanshu, a national team boxer was very aggressive from the beginning, traded combination punches on his hapless West Bengal opponent with the latter left to fend for himself all the time. But then the Patiala boxer was very calculative in his approach and just ensured that he moved into the next round. But the first knockout of the day happened when Arunachal's Tara Heli Tana got the verdict in his favour in the second round against Uttar Pradesh's Ankit Chauhan. Besides, there were about half a dozen RSC verdicts on the day while most other bouts were one-sided, earlier in the day, a brief opening ceremony was held with boxers representing all states and institutions attending the function. The Championships are important for those aspiring boxers who would want to make it to the India squad and subsequently get selected for the Tokyo Olympics. The semi-final and final bouts are scheduled for November 1 and 2.

NDA government walking extra mile to gain confidence of Muslims: Abdul Ansari

Agency
New Delhi Oct 28,

BJP Minority Morcha national president Abdul Rasheed Ansari has said the party's government at the Centre is walking the "extra mile" to gain the confidence of minorities and has been successful in changing the perception of it being "anti-Muslim" to a large extent. The opposition, he alleged, had launched a "fear-mongering campaign" among minorities against the BJP. The BJP-led NDA government has brought in development without any discrimination but the opposition has set a "separate yardstick" for the party when it came to dealing with minorities. "Political parties (opposition) have targeted us (BJP) in order to isolate us from the minorities. They had used a fear-mongering campaign among minorities in an attempt to eat into the BJP's vote-bank. "This has been going on for several years. But things have changed of late and you will find the party increasing its base among minorities in various parts of the country," Ansari told PTI in an interview here. Minorities and backward classes, for the first time, have realised that the BJP, unlike other parties, "delivers rather than making false promises", he said. Talking about the recent incidents of lynchings in the country, Ansari said the BJP leadership had spoken out against them and action has been taken against culprits. "You have to look at the intention of the government and the party. Both Prime Minister Narendra Modi and party president Amit Shah have condemned them (lynchings). You cannot count on statements made by people, who are either not related to the party or are remotely related to it," he said. About the incident where Union minister Jayanta Sinha felicitated eight people accused of lynching in Jharkhand, earlier this year, Ansari contended that the gesture was not appreciated by anyone in the the saffron party. "Has anybody appreciated Jayanta Sinha for felicitating them? It is not expected that Amit Shah ji or the prime minister will speak out on a regular basis on every single incident that is happening in the country," he said. Meat trader Alimuddin Ansari was beaten to death on June 29 last year by a mob in Ramgarh police station area on the suspicion that he was carrying beef in his car. Expressing happiness over the release of the eight accused in the case on bail, Sinha had garlanded them and offered them sweets. Asked about poor representation of Muslims in distribution of tickets by the BJP, he said, "The issue should not be seen through the prism of religion. Tickets are not given in our party on the basis of religion. It is given on the basis of eligibility and capability of an individual". Ansari was also quick to point out that the BJP had given tickets to an "overwhelming number" of Muslim candidates in the West Bengal panchayat polls. "About 850 Muslims were given BJP tickets in the three-tier rural polls in the state held in May. It only goes on to show how much we care about the community," he asserted. Criticising the erstwhile Congress government for not doing enough for the development of the community in the country, he said the BJP government has increased the budget for minorities by "leaps and bounds". "Since Independence there has been a huge gap between what was promised to the minorities and what was actually delivered. But we are serious about development of Muslims as we believe in the policy of 'Sabka Sath, Sabka Vikas'. "If you go through the history of our country of the last 60 years, you will see how many large scale communal riots took place during the Congress regime ... But now you won't witness such a situation in the country," Ansari added.

India calls for UN sanctions against terrorists involved in sexual violence

United Nation, Oct. 28

India has called upon the UN Security Council to proactively list terrorists and terror groups involved in sexual violence in armed conflicts. First Secretary in the Permanent Mission of India to the UN, Paulomi Tripathi, said that women's role and perspectives in peace processes remain largely neglected. She was speaking during a UN Security Council debate on 'Women, Peace and Security'.

Ms. Tripathi voiced her concern that sexual violence, abductions and human trafficking continue to be used as weapons of war in armed conflict by non-state actors and terrorist organisations. She asserted that the Council must make all efforts to realise the full potential of integrating women, peace and security. Emphasising the need for global cooperation in this front, she said no country is in a position to effectively counter these challenges alone.

Earlier, UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres told the Council's annual high-level debate that the participation of women in formal peace processes remains extremely limited.
