

Policeman from Manipur honoured with best photography award

IT News
Imphal, Oct 8,

What is specific about personnel of the Manipur police is that they are not known for their courage in fighting or protecting common people but some among them are too good in photography. Moirangthem Ajoy @ Da Naoba, son of M. Bijoy sing and M. Jobonlata devi of Khagempalli Pankha Nganaphithong Mapan, presently serving as a Rifleman at 2nd Manipur Rifle under Commandant P Manjit Singh (MPS), known for his courage in protecting the common people of Moreh town in mid 2000s as Nepali, was honoured as the best Photographer Award of the year by New Delhi Based A. R. Foundation. Moirangthem Ajoy has been awarded the prestigious award in recognition to his contribution to the issues and aspects pertaining and related to Humanity. The award was handed over to him yesterday during mega event at Green Peace Foundation, Din Dayal Upadhyay Marg, ITO, New Delhi-02. Moirangthem Ajoy Singh is popularly known to my friends as Da Naoba. He was borne and brought up in a chaotic society due to conflict between groups which follow different ideology. "I was many time upset by the way people get destroyed or seeing people destroying the beauty of my mother nature. I was often driven in deep pain seeing old ladies struggling for survival, young children deprived of their rights and homeless searching to hide from the summer heat and the stormy rains", Ajay said to Imphal Times after receiving the award. The man who who is train to use rifle said, "the virtue of patriotism that runs through my veins make me chose Security Force, as I am curious of bringing normalcy in my state and to highlight the beauty of my native state gifted by Mother Nature". Photography is Ajoy's passion. He enjoyed capturing the beauty of the gift of Mother Nature. He waited at foothills for hours waiting to capture the sun rising from in between the hills and spend many evenings to capture shot of the sunset dipping in our Loktak Lake. "The more I went out to capture the beauty of my state, the more I started noticing women in my mother's age struggling for survival, daughters and sons of my son's age spoiled by leaving them at field when they were supposed to be seen in school", Ajoy said to this newspaper. "With my SLR (Rifle) on my left soldier and the DSLR on my right soldier as I am left handed. I always wanted to be a peacekeeper and I followed order of my superior to do things that will restore peace", Ajoy said and added that he like more shooting with his DSLR than with the SLR.

Nagaland-made Hydroger makes difference at Indo-Pak border

Kohima, Oct 8,

Nagaland has successfully installed its pet product at an army camp located at remote place in Jammu & Kashmir's Leh Ladakh region. The 'Hydroger' of 3 KW generates power from running water from any water source. Nagaland has achieved a rare distinction of being the manufacturer of a mini generator called 'Hydroger' of 3 KW that generates power from running water from any water source. After having successfully lighted up many remote hamlets across the Northeast for the past few years through its hydrogers, Nagaland Empowerment of People through Energy Development (NEPED) added yet another feather to its cap by successfully installing its pet product at an army camp located at remote place in Jammu & Kashmir's Leh Ladakh region. According to NEPED officials, the team from Nagaland successfully installed the "Made in Nagaland" 3-kw hydroger, manufactured at its Dimapur-based Centre of Excellence for Renewable Energy Studies (CERES), to light up the army camp in Drass sector near the Tiger Hill, which became famous during the Kargil War, in the Line of Control (LoC) that divides India and Pakistan. Soldiers deployed at the icy and freezing heights from altitudes ranging from 12,000 feet to 20,000 feet in the area were earlier dependent on captive power generation by using generators run on diesel. However, transporting diesel for generators to such remote and mountainous locations on foot and mules was a major logistical burden, besides the generators caused much pollution due to burning of fuel. In order to address this issue and seek an alternative source of energy, Indian Army's 14 Corps (Leh-Ladakh) chief engineer Brigadier SP Yadava sought the assistance of NEPED, an organisation whose potential he knew very well by virtue of his earlier posting in Nagaland. Thereafter, a NEPED team started coordinating, planning and designing to undertake this challenging task of electrifying the army post. After ascertaining the feasibility, the team moved to the intended site and, backed by active support of army engineers and troops deployed at the site, worked tirelessly in sub-zero temperatures to complete the hydroger installation within 48 hours, the officials added. The hydrogers produced at CERES are certified at IIT Roorkee's Alternate Hydro Energy Centre. The "Made in Nagaland" hydrogers are already in use in other States like Arunachal Pradesh, Manipur, Meghalaya, Sikkim, Kerala and Maharashtra. Several villages in Nagaland, particularly in the Indo-Myanmar border area, are using hydrogers for lighting up their homes for the last 10 years. Hydroger and other hydro turbine technologies hold immense potential for community-owned small hydro power generation in villages across Nagaland.

India started the present Indo-Manipur

The Unity and Integrity of India is a failed policy. The projection of Hindu unity is based on embittering Hindu against the Muslims and Christians. To achieve emotional Integrity in India, the Government and its advisers have heightened tension with two neighbors viz, China and Pakistan. The principle of socioeconomic policy doesn't embrace Indian Unity and integrity. "The so-called Indian War of Independence (Sepoy Mutiny 1857) and Anglo-

Manipur War 1891, were two separate things. There are several causes of Sepoy Mutiny but the immediate causes were due to spreading false rumor that were offensive to Hindu and Muslim religion. The Anglo-Manipur War was the outcome of unwillingness of Manipuri People to be colonized by British and hence fought against British colonialists. Indian leaders must know the different nature and causes of these two wars. The objective of First Nipulan (1904) was the fierce agitation of Manipuri Women against the British Policy of "forced labor" imposed on Manipuri male population.

"The First Nipulan occurred two years before Gandhi's first Non Violence Movement in South Africa, on 11 September 1906. Gandhi's agitation was participated by about 1,100 Chinese people. The Second Nipulan (1939) was started against the free and uncontrolled trade of capitalists which imposed heavy burden on the livelihood of the poor. It can be labeled as Anti-Globalization protest.

"Putting an end to people's representative government of Manipur in 1948, delaying of 22 years in getting Statehood and the current impasse of MU deadlock explicitly show the disregard and appalling ignorance of New Delhi towards Manipuri. People felt the pulse of using excessive forces by the State Government under the advice and mindset of a non-indigenous person to suppress current issues and voices of the common people. Such nefarious schemes are not new, but an old Chessboard Game of India. The Manipur Constitution Act 1947 was drafted by 17 Members of Constitution Making Committee including both hills and plain representatives and which was adopted by the then interim government of Manipur. By introducing democratic election in Manipur, people elected their true choices. People's representatives, and a responsible government was installed after the First Manipur Assembly sitting was held on 18 October, 1948. But the distressing factor was that instead of respecting the elected government, India forcibly merged Manipur, and this wrongful act compelled us to arm ourselves and fight against the Indian colonialism. During the reign of reactionary advisory council of Part C State states, some elites, who blindly expected Indian blessing, felt the betrayal and ploys of Indian leaders. The high-handedness of Indian leaders with their outlook towards Manipur aroused the then political leaders to agitate and demand for restoring "the 1948 People's Government" in the years 1950s and 1960s.

"People did not protest about the neglected development, but it was rather a collective response against lower status of Manipur and abolishment of people's government. Viewing the arrogant and unresponsive attitudes of Delhi, people started openly demanding the Self-Determination. Manipur National Union declared that Manipur should be a 'Buffer State' in 1953. Some Hill MLAs, in their meeting on 27th July 1949, had urged Manipur should not be part of India, rather it should be Crown State like Hong Kong under British for a certain periods or if inevitable it must have terms and conditions before joining Indian Union. Such expressions, protests, and demands truly exhibited that majority people did not trust India, and had apprehension that India will swallow it; so Manipur must have its own stand. Such oppressive Indian administration reflected and penetrated to the mindsets of farsighted revolutionary leaders who are still fighting against colonial India. "Many rivers, which originated in Kangleipak, and flow to different destinations have benefited our neighboring countries or states in terms of their developmental sectors like irrigation, agriculture, transportation, generation of hydro power, and water supply. There is no need for fear among ourselves for scarcity of power and water supply in Kangleipak because our main rivers do not originate from neighboring states and country. Nowadays rivers are used as political instruments in many states of India and in many countries while sharing their water resources. But our political leaders are ignoring this reality and they must understand the natural and topographical advantages. Any plant will grow in our soils and also get fruits. Despite of our rich natural resources such as mountains, lakes, rivers, mineral resources, forest products; we cannot explore extra benefits and advantages. This is due to the fact that Kangleipak is under the colonial rule of India and colonial hangover of British rule. Our own language, scripts, Games and sports, old and new written constitutions, Royal Chronicles, International Treaties, Arts and Cultures are all at this stage after a long evolution.

"What more elements do we need as an Independent Nation? Why should not we feel the pride from such uniqueness? "Political leaders should leave the habit of begging funds from Delhi. This is shameful. Instead of begging, they should try to mobilize own resources for this land. How long Manipur will depend on Delhi for funds? Such shameful things never happened in Manipur before 1949. The present dependency syndrome is the outcome of our lost economic and political rights. Peaceful coexistence of Kangleipak is always disturbed by New Delhi because they never stop passing the ball to Kangleicha by invoking communal based political and boundary issues. Therefore, time has come now for the politicians to become awake and conscious about the current political status of Kangleipak and they should also realize the facts by asking themselves what should be the right status of Manipur which is more appropriate with our 2000 years old history. Politicians should also see the reality that we have been fighting against the Indian colonialism to reclaim our lost political and economic rights. Long lasting peace, harmony, public confidence and welfare will return on Kangleipak and this is possible only when our inherent political and economic status is restored. Knowing the geopolitical situation of this land, we must fully prepare ourselves to face any unpleasant fallout of the ACT EAST POLICY and Globalization. It is demoralizing to witness that when leaders from Delhi call "Come with slightly bending your head", these puppet politicians would never give up the habit of getting down on their knees and crawl instead of slightly bending. These are the attitudes of present-day political leaders. People should not trust these disgraceful politicians. Trusting them is akin to make Delhi a shark and to swallow us conveniently. Finally, I would like to appeal that our revolutionary struggle is a conflict being occurred in our land, not within India and it is also a true conflict between a "once an independent nation, Kangleipak" and "an independent India". This is a war based on political and ideological doctrines. Therefore, this is not a law and order issue. We never start a war but we are facing a war being waged by India.
