Edn. Minister attended Excellence Achievers Awards

IT News
Imphal, Sept. 15,

Education Minister Radheshyam attended the Excellence Achievers Awards, 2018 held at Senapati District Indoor Stadium yesterday. The function was organised by the Mao Students' Union in collaboration with Mao Academy. Interacting with the students Radheshyam said that no matter how many hardships one may faced, experience of life is the best teacher to prepare oneself for the challenges to get the goal of life. Advising the young minds not to get disheartened by the failure he said that there is no failure but only lessons to be learnt. He added that failure is just a step towards success. The students these days are engaged between the school, home-work and tuition. The parents need to review on how the children are being nurtured. Children should be made to learn, think, understand and reflect themselves in the best possible way they could portray. Education, he said, is not just to get mark and a job but it is to lead and makes others lead a better and meaningful life.

Shillong, Sept 15,

The NPP led Government in Meghalaya is expected to take a final call on the two railway projects in the state after deliberations with the political parties and stakeholders. "We will take a decision on the two railway projects after deliberations with the political parties and stakeholders." Chief Minister Conrad K Sangma informed after reviewing the current status of the railway projects in the State here on Friday. It may be mentioned that the two railway projects which include the 21.5 km Tetelia-Bymihat and 108 km Shillong-Byrnihat rail line. The two projects are yet to take off due to opposition from the groups who are against the introduction of railways in Khasi and Jaintia Hills region. The chief minister informed that the government would soon hold a discussion with cabinet ministers and different political parties on the issue adding that they would hold deliberations with the stakeholders before taking a call to move forward with the two projects. Meanwhile, Conrad said that the Centre have sanctioned nearly Rs 8,000 crore for the infrastructural development including the two projects in the state. According to him, the Union Minister of Railways, Piyush Goyal had expressed concern over the delay of the two projects. "As of now, the construction of the two projects has been stopped," Conrad said.

Conrad however said that the railway line is an important infrastructure development which can change the economic scenario of the state. "The coming of the railways will help to change the economic scenario in our state," he said. The chief minister however said that the local people and NGOs have expressed their concerns on the introduction of railways adding that it is the duty of the government ensure that local sentiments are also not hurt and also to ensure that things move forward.

(4) Increasing penetration by the State, market forces, immigration and job opportunities could not phase off the structural crisis leading to inequality and unrest. The State invested in cosmetic reformism to divert attention and militarization leading to suppression, repression and insecurity. The situation had a catalytic impact on generating frustration and disillusionment about livelihood. Material conditions of peasant rebellion and labours' democratic assertions have been looming.

(5) Concurrent to the penetration by State and market forces, parallel community formations, the sense of loss of freedom and 'national' identity, there has been the emergence of armed insurgent groups. However, the insurgents were not been able to propagate the ideology of an independent and classless society to create a collective revolutionary movement across communities. Their politics could not advance much as they concentrated more on creating nationalism markers based on culture and community histories. In this scenario the local ruling class indulged in two way strategies to retain their political and economic power. On the one hand, they carried out sectarian and communal propaganda to cover up their exploitative regime. On the one hand, they played a leadership role in carving out exclusive revenue blocs for unrestrained control over land, labour, funds and resources. All these were being interwoven into one through communal interpretation of economic grievances and misuse. Most peasants and wage labours were therefore communally organised. They remained sectarian and disunited.

Questions now
Freedom / sovereignty and revolution are universal truth. If on the earth there had been no culture of reconstruction to overcome social regression and economic decline the world revolution would have been non-existent. If the microscopic few that control the State are indifferent to freedom and revolution then it exposes that they do not see beyond self-interest and are the destroyers of democracy. They cannot forever rely on black laws, cosmetic reforms and divisive propaganda to permanently cover up the questions of freedom and revolution that have emerged due to the constraints of their political economy. Their tactics may delay the awakening of the masses. However, there is no reason that the poison inherent in their imprudent administration will not lead to self-destruction of the army and divisive propaganda that they rely on to retain their rule. The polemics that Manipur is an inseparable organic part of India is based on the statute framed by the Indian capitalists. It is within the framework of their law that there had developed the exigency to suppress at gun point the freedom question, self-determination movement by communities and movements against destructive projects. On the other hand, it is their inherent tendency to impoverish their country and kill, thereby, violating constitutional fundamental rights that are their own making. It does not bring development. But people want peace and development. How to reconcile this contradiction? How long will they defend the country with the paid soldiers? Will the highhanded and hooligan police, army and their relatives remain immune from the unrest and burden of the overall destructions and havocs brought about by the structural crisis? It is highly needed that they change for good the direction of their gun and contribute to the revolutionary cause. Otherwise, they will also be drowned along with the people as a whole. History is the testimony; the capitalist must change the path away from the self-vested profit agenda and exploitative culture in order that the question of rebellion or insurgency is resolved. The responsibility of a revolutionary party is to act as the vanguard in leading the people towards revolution. Unless the people as a whole participate a party alone cannot bring revolution. Peoples are awakened by the directions of the party's revolutionary political and economic programmes. The questions, pertaining to freedom for what and whose freedoms, are automatically responded by the political and economic programmes. The party should be able to explain clearly to the people who the enemies of revolution are and who the revolutionaries are. All these are constructed on the basis of revolutionary ideology. However, in my homeland despite an increase in the number of parties formed in the name of freedom, it seems distinctive strategy and tactics to be based on revolutionary ideology are still difficult. There is widespread rumour about the fact that insurgents are working in cahoots with the State. The number of those who want to know the differences and commonalities among the insurgent parties has been increasing. Many are today curious to make a sharp distinction between those parties that merely use the cloak of freedom under the instigation of the capitalists to misguide people and those parties that genuinely stand for the revolutionary cause. Those parties that could propagate a matured revolutionary ideology, exhibit farsighted revolutionary strategy and carry out committed revolutionary tactics will enjoy long lasting comradeship with the people.

Finally
Today, in Manipur, Irabot Day has been extensively organised by the State and several other organisations and individuals. They have converted Irabot into a festival/ritual. They have also converted Irabot's photograph and other related publications into commodities. Most do not discuss Irabot's Capitalism and other revolutionary voices and they have distanced themselves away from the revolutionary path. It is a common sight that leaders are at the forefront in offering floral tribute to Irabot's statue; bourgeoisie intellectuals hurriedly arrived and returned hurriedly after delivering public lectures using difficult technical jargons that are difficult to be grasped by the laypersons. Most of them do not bother to play roles in the revolutionary movement. The merit is some hotels and shops near the programme venue could increase their sale and benefitted. Every year Irabot Day is organised. When elections came after every five years interval most people took money from candidates and the rich were always elected. Is this patriotism, is this civilisation, and is this democracy?
