

IMA opposes Pharmacists from getting doctor Entitlement

By a Correspondent, New Delhi, May 30,

With the reported directions provided by the Pharmacy Council of India to us the prefix Doctor (Dr) while awarding degrees to Pharm D graduates, Indian Medical Association (IMA) strongly opposes any such moves. As this title reflects entitlement and identity, IMA is against all such shift from those who are trained in other streams of Health sector to venture into medical practice. According to IMA, such illegitimate conferment cannot become entitlements, just in case if an advocate or an engineer should be called doctor by an executive order. Such social anarchy only creates confusion in the minds of common man and the impact it has on the structure of a well organized society is clearly evident. Aspiration in any course needs to be legitimate and appropriate to be recognized. The roles and responsibilities of nurses, physiotherapists, optometrists and others in the field of healthcare are irreplaceable and are as per their entitlement. "Bridge courses and illegitimate conferment of the title of Dr. are two faces of the same issue which defies the sole purpose of NEET. This year the cut-off marks in the NEET for Government seats were 497 out of 700, wherein most of the students, settled for non-medical courses. A Pharmacist by any other name will remain a Pharmacist. Indirect entitlement to practice of modern medicine on human beings by colored exercise of power by bodies created for a limited purpose is unacceptable. Transgressions of entitlement are illegal and illegitimate." Said Dr Santanu Sen, National President, Indian Medical Association.

The rules and regulations governing the practice of Modern medicine are settled positions of law in India. The Supreme Court of India in (1) Poonam verma v/s AswinPattel and others reported in 1996 (4) SCC 332, (2) Dr. Muktiar Chand and others v/s State of Punjab and others reported in AIR 1999 (SC) 468, (3) Medical Council of Rajasthan reported in AIR 1996 (S.C) 2073, has clearly held that, only a person holding a registration with the Medical Council of India or the state Medical Councils is entitled to practice Modern System of Medicine. As per the judgments and the rulings stated above, pharmacists cannot use prefix "Dr" to their name, they can work only under medical supervision and in any case cannot be the first contact person for an illness. "IMA has the duty and privilege to defend the rights of medical graduates. IMA has written to the Union Health Ministry and MCI on the inappropriateness of the announcement by the Pharmacy Council. IMA demands that the Government of India use its authority and settle the issue as per the law of the land. IMA also urges the Pharmacy Council to take back the unlawful order. The entitlement to a medical graduate comes out of merit and the nature of the course. The whole purpose of the exam is diluted by adding other medical streams." Said Dr RV Asokan, Hony. Secretary General, IMA. The Government of India, Ministry of Health and Family Welfare bearing No R/ 14015/ 25/96, wherein the Government of India has clearly held the term 'Dr' can be used only by the practitioners of recognized systems of medicine.

William Pettigrew's contribution .....

A reaction against it was immense ; many tribals invaded the mission campuses, some missionaries were man-handled, converts were driven out from the villages and boycotted from their communities.

But Christian Missionaries, including Rev. William Pettigrew, despite such opposition, did not leave the tribal areas, instead of leaving they scattered through the country, placing themselves under the protection of the British administrators. The tribals, perhaps, thought it impolite to chase the Missionaries; they did not push matter further beyond their villages; the missionaries kept on preaching, showed 'love' to the tribals and preaching openly to the public ; and their patience, tolerance and tenacity served them all. The success achieved by the Christian Missionaries is a matter of much sociological interest for investigation. It is difficult to say what factors exactly made the Missionaries work successful ; because, the information we get from loose records are scanty. Anyway, whatever method were followed, the early success of the missionary work was astonishing. But I presume, the greatest weapon they used was 'love' and 'patience'. They identified themselves (e.g. William Pettigrew) with the local people and showed intense human interest ; co-ercion might partly explain of their success, but force exercised by the administrators upon the subjects wielded tremendous influence on the local people. Another important factor which helped the missionary work was "concessions" given to the converts ; for example, free education, gifts and presents, this method was a powerful bribe in religious negotiation with the staunch tribal religious worshippers. The tribals converts to new creed could have easier access to the administrators and the missionaries and this could necessarily give some advantage over the ir tribals rivals who did not have such opportunity and this trick could increase their power at the expenses of their neighbours. But these concessions were actually offered for the privilege of preaching, and sometimes much more than the privilege was demanded and obtained. Once the objective was achieved, the missionaries would asked for land as a gift for their missionaries work, at times threatening, in case of refusal.

Soon after that the missionaries began to prove the character of their creed by furious attacks upon the traditional religion. They (missionaries) condemned the tribal religion, attacked their culture, stopped, even though, their cultural activities such as singing, dancing and festivals which did not have any direct link with religion and did not have religious flavour ; but attributed such acts as the "wrath of God" and after which act, by the zeal of their converts, many tribals ceremonial custom were destroyed ; festivals, local mild rice beer drinking were banned and abandoned ; traditional songs and dances were replaced by alien songs and dances, religious rites were forbidden and replaced by Christian faith. Despite the tremendous damages inflicted on the tribal social milieus by the Christian missionaries, one must admit that Christian missionaries, specially Rev. William Pettigrew brought to the tribals a wider harmonizing influence ; a new gospel of love and tenderness, together with various mundane new benefits like schools, dispensaries, idea of cleanliness, dignity of men and above all, opened vistas to the modern world.
